

Work Ethics

What are work ethics?

- Come from within a person
- How you feel about your job
- How you do your job
- How you take responsibility for your job
- How you get along with others
- Who you are!

Work ethics involves:

- Attitude
- Behavior
- Respect
- Communication
- Interaction – how you get along with others – how you treat others
- Wanting to learn new things and be good at them

Involves:

- Honesty (not lying, cheating, stealing)
- Accountability
- What is right, wrong, above board, under the table
- Doing a job well and completely
- Valuing what you do
- Having a sense of purpose and feelings/being a part of your work environment
- Providing a fair amount of work for the time you are paid- doing your fair share

Group Discussion: What does a person's behavior look like who do not have positive work ethics?

Ticket

Welcomed rehab group this morning and spent a brief time checking in with everyone. Presented and discussed concept of “work ethics” and group process was able to identify components of this concept:

- Responsibility and accountability
- Attitude toward work
- Honesty and respect
- Interaction and positive communication with others
- Ability to problem solve in an honest manner

Group discussed each of these area and were challenged to define their own work ethic and areas they might light to strengthen this.

Individual Note:

Client participated actively in group discussion. Willing to identify own areas of development and to work on these. Eagerness to achieve good work habits high. Defensiveness low.

Plan:

- Continue discussion and learning around positive work skills to promote success in employment.
- Continue working on managing work situations which challenge emotionally and psychologically.